Guilty of Murder.

New York, April 26.—Dr. Robert W. Buchanan, who has been on trial for the past few weeks charged with the poisoning of his wife, was found guilty to-night of murder in the first degree. The jury had been out since yesterday evening, and their lengthy delay gave the defendant and his counsel the hope that they would at least disagree. The verdict to-night was in the nature of a sur- prise.

The Buchanan case has excited a good deal of [illegible] hereabouts, following so closely as it did the case of Carlyle W. Harris, and [illegible] similar in many respects to that cele- [illegible] Buchanan married a woman [illegible] than himself. Ex Commissioner Hamill claimed that his term had not ex- [illegible] till his successor was appointed while Goodykoontz claimed that his term was up [illegible] first of January. THE NAVAL REVIEW.

[illegible] New York [illegible]

A MAGNIFICENT PAGEANT

[illegible] Ten Different Nations [illegible] Everything [illegible]

Looking over the city from the high point of the Associated Press office the city was cov- ered with a fluttering cloud of red, white and blue streaming from forests of flag staffs.

The [illegible] ships which sailed in out of the mists of the sea yesterday were bright and majestic realities in the glorious sun- shine this morning. The only element want- ing to ensure the triumphant spectacular suc- cess of the great naval parade was supplied by the perfect weather. Not a trace was left of the steel gray clouds and rain and fog of yesterday. Clear skies, bright sunlight and bracing breezes gave a setting to a pano- ramic scene whose beauty and suggestiveness have never been surpassed.

In the sharp, clear light of the early morn- ing, every distinctive feature of the great war ships stood out in bold relief as they lay anchored in two great columns stretched over the whole surface of the bay, and the vessels of each of the ten nationalities repre- sented could be distinguished at a glance. The snow white hulls and the graceful out- lines of the American fleet were not more conspicuous than the huge black hulk of the British flag ship, the towering military masts of the French, Jean Bart, or the sharp lines of the crack German cruiser, Kaiserin Augusta, with its formidable Krupp guns. The squat form outlines of the Dutch Van Speyk, again contrasted with the graceful build of the swift Argentine Nueve de Julio and the massive armament of the Brazilian battle ship, Aquidaban.

The most striking feature of the scene was the absolute silence that prevailed dur- ing the early hours of the day. This hob- nobbing war syndicate lay motionless, re- flected in the placid waters of the bay by the early morning rays of the sun, like the often quoted "Painted ship upon a painted ocean." There was a grim suggestiveness of repressed force and stern discipline in this impressive quietude.

But this quietude did not last long. As the morning wore on and the preparations for breaking anchor began, the scene changed to one of brisk animation and life. The bay became alive with pleasure craft of ev- ery description, and the patrol boats had a difficult task to keep the anchorage grounds clear of intruders and to permit the forma- tion of the columns in which in stately pro- cession the vessels were to pass through the narrows into the upper bay, and to move up North river to their assigned stations, there to await to-morrow's review.

Patriotism was evident in the streets. Fathers and mothers felt that the occasion was one their progeny should see, and throngs were seeking places of vantage from which to see the great naval pageant. The temperature was crisp and sharp.

It was shortly after 9 o'clock when Admi- ral Gherardi's flagship gave the preliminary signal to break anchor and fall into line. They started up the harbor in two columns, the port column led by the Philadelphia and the starboard column by the British cruiser Blake. Most of the foreign ships were in the starboard column nearest the New York shore, and all passed the Battery in the fol- lowing order:

Port column—United States vessels, Rear Admiral Gherardi, commander in chief; Philadelphia flag, Newark flag, Atlanta, San Francisco, Bancroft, Bennington, Balti- more, Chicago flag, Yorktown, Charleston, Vesuvius, Concord. Then followed the Ar- gentine Republic, Rear Admiral Howard, Nueve de Julio. Holland, Captain Arriens, Van Speyk. Germany, Captain Buchsel, Kaiserin Augusta, Seeadler and the United States monitor, Miantonomoh.

As the noble Philadelphia pointed her way toward the city and it was seen the great pageant had thus started, tug and steam whistle broke forth with screaming, and out over the waters sounded faintly the shouts of the crowds who blackened the shores of Long Island and Staten Island.

Then came the Newark, flying at the fore the white pennant with a red cross, showing that she was on guard duty for the day. Next came the Atlanta, with her low free board making her distinct from the others, and the San Francisco was next. Her anchor was still foul and was making trouble as she went along. The naval academy boat Ban- croft was trim and neat as she sailed along next and the Bennington steamed along a little too close to her leader for perfect for- mation. The last of the first division was the Baltimore.

The Chicago led the second division of the port column, with Rear-Admiral Walker's flag. With two blue stars flying from her main, she was a picture of grace and strength with her bark rig and her big guns peeping out of the open portholes.

Then the Yorktown appeared, followed by the crack cruiser of the Pacific coast, the Charleston, the Vesuvius next with her three dynamite guns shining in the sunlight, while Concord brought up the rear of the Ameri- can [illegible]

In addition to [illegible] the two [illegible] Admiral Gherardi took the [illegible] and [illegible] into his column [illegible] Kearsarge [illegible]

[illegible] Minnesota [illegible] was a war [illegible] Van Speyk, which [illegible] port column.

[illegible] the warship Blake had [illegible] position with the British [illegible] waiting to give [illegible] As soon as the Phila- delphia got abreast of [illegible] Vice Admiral [illegible] Blake was [illegible] yards dis- tant from the Philadelphia. Behind her [illegible] the Magicienne, Tartar and Australia, and they were followed by the Rus- sians: Dmitri Donskoi, General Ad- miral and Rynda. Next in order were the French warships Arethuse, Jean Bart and Hussard. The Jean Bart was not particularly graceful, looking like a great black spider, ugly and venomous. She [illegible] the [illegible] largest boat in the fleet, though [illegible] others could outfight her. Next in order came the [illegible] ship Etna, and her companion, the Giovanni Bausan, followed by the Spaniards Infanta Isabel, Reina Regente and Nueva Espana, while the Brazilians, the Aquidaban, the Tira- dentes and the Republica, brought up the rear of the port squadron. The Aquidaban was the only full armor line of battle ship in the squadron.

The Seeadler and Van Speyk, which [illegible] at the rear of the port column, be- gan to [illegible] and great clouds of black smoke poured out of their funnels. The alignment of the American fleet was nearly per- fect. The white ships were 400 yards apart and were [illegible] in color by the three foreigners in the column, only one, the Van Speyk, being black. As the port column steamed along at 9½ knots, not a boat was ten feet out of line, and they kept the for- mation as if they had been anchored bow and stern on a surveyor's line.

The start was made so promptly at 9:45 that thousands of spectators who had gath- ered to witness the spectacle from the Never- sink heights, and the heights of Fort Wads- worth and other points of vantage on Staten Island, had barely taken up positions be- fore the guns of Forts Hamilton and Wads- worth sounded their welcome to the advanc- ing fleet. Steaming neck and neck, the two admirals and their flagships leading the way, set the pace at a rate of between eight and nine knots an hour. A brisk breeze curled the waters into white-capped breakers, but the magnificent ships glided along so smooth that their motion scarcely seemed percepti- ble. A cable and a half length (300 yards) separated each ship from the others and this distance was maintained with absolute pre- cision. The contrast presented by the snow- white American fleet and the dark-hulled for- eigners was very perceptible as they moved along side by side, each heightening the ef- fect of the other.

The two schools of naval architecture (for nearly all the ships in the fleet not American built were of English construction), were strongly marked, and every patriot felt with- in him a glow of pride that the new navy of the United States did not suffer by compar- ison.

The time occupied in passing the forts was exactly half an hour.

After the naval ships had passed the Nar- rows and entered the bay, the fleet of ex- cursion steamers and yachts and big tug boats fell in and became a volunteer escort. The absence of cannonading left the air clear and every outline of the magnificent ships stood out in luminous silhouette against the cloudless sky. The flags of the different nationalities and even the names of the ships were clearly discernable from either side. The fleets were preceded by navy yard tugs and patrol steamers, whose duty it was to keep the course clear. The rear was brought up by four revenue cutters. No vessels of any kind were allowed to break through this line.

The ships steamed up the river until the Philadelphia and Blake reached a point op- posite Eighty-ninth street, when the signal to anchor was given. The rear of the double line was opposite West Thirty-fourth street, and was held by the Miantonomoh. The Dolphin is now anchored off Twenty-second street and will remain there until the Presi- dent boards her at 10:30 o'clock to-morrow to review the ships. The entire water front was lined with people and the water dotted with all kinds of crafts. Steam whistles were blown continuously from the time the fleet entered the North river until the last vessel dropped anchor.

[illegible] STATUE UNVAILED.

New York, April 26.—A tribute of honor to the son of another country, whose genius befriended us in the time of sorest need, con- stituted the first formality in the Columbian fetes of to-day.

While the Columbian fleet was slowly waking into life in the harbor this morning, on shore the air was rent with [illegible] of bands and preparations were making to un- veil the statue of Ericsson.

As early as 7:30 o'clock the members of the New York and Brooklyn Swedish singing so- cieties assembled in Union square and marched down Broadway to Battery to [illegible] in the unveiling of the monument. The pro- cession moved at 8 o'clock in the following order: Platoon of police, band, Major Louis Hallen, grand marshal, Bayne's Sixty-ninth regiment band, twenty-four Swedish socie- ties, the Rev. M. Stohle, Miss Anderson in a carriage, Amaranthus lodge of Swedish Odd Fellows, Manhem lodge of Swedish Odd Fel- lows.

The Rev. Mr. Stohle is pastor of the Swedish Church of this city, of which John Ericsson was a member and a trustee. The inventor was also a member of the Amaran- thus league, which took part in the parade.

The double turreted monitor Miantono- moh came up into the bay early this morn- ing, anchored off the Battery and fired twenty-two guns when the statue was un- veiled by Miss Anderson. The statue was then delivered to the civic authorities by Secretary Ashley W. Cole and accepted on behalf of the city by Professor Paul Dana of the park board. Colonel William O. Church made the oration.

The statue of Ericsson was modeled by Julian Scott Hartley and was cast in bronze by the Gorham Manufacturing company at Providence. The figure is 8 feet 3 inches high. The polished Quincy granite pedestal is 8 feet 9 inches high, making the total ele- vation of the monument seventeen feet. There are four low relief bronze panels set in the pedestal. The subjects represented are the battle between the Merrimac and Monitor, steam fire engine in action, steam sloop-of-war Princeton, the first application of a screw propeller to warships, and group of various inventions, such as solar or caloric engines.

The head of the statue was modeled from a bust taken from life. The figure stands in an easy position, holding in the left hand a scroll, to which the inventor points with his right hand, in which he holds a pair of com- passes. Ericsson is represented as wearing an old-fashioned, double breasted coat, a costume which the inventor affected.

Modjeska Ill.

Pittsburg, April 26.—Helen Modjeska be- came quite ill last evening at her hotel and was unable to appear at the Duquesne thea- ter where she was to play Katharine in "King Henry VIII." The advance sale had been large and an immense audience had to be dismissed from the theater. Dr. Mercur was called and had to remain with the actress until after midnight before she had recov- ered sufficiently for him to leave. He thinks she may be able to appear to-night.

OGDEN CONGRESS.

NICARAGUA AND FREE SILVER.

Sentiment Favors the Canal but is Suspic- ious of a Job Strong Resolutions Demanding Free and Unlim- ited Silver.

Ogden, Utah, April 26.—The Transmissis- sippi Congress began its morning session by passing resolutions calling on railways to place World's Fair rates at such figures as to enable the masses in the West to attend. The Nicaragua canal question was taken up. Loet of Colorado opposed the construction of the canal by the United States because it would only be contributing to the prosperity of Great Britain.

John P. Irish of California argued that the general prosperity of the world would be so enhanced by the building of the canal and that every part of this country would share in it.

Governor Waite wanted the canal, if built, absolutely owned and controlled by this country in the interest of the people of the nation.

Heyburn of Idaho spoke for his State in favor of the canal.

C. W. Crass of California opposed the ca- nal. While millions were asked for internal waterway improvements, he said, which could not be granted, it was folly to build an artificial waterway. There was no certainty that the profits would pay operating ex- penses.

J. W. Feighan of Washington and J. H. Roberts of Sacramento favor the canal. W. H. Harvey of Utah claimed that govern- mental aid without governmental control would again repeat the history of the Pa- cific railroads. Holmes of Oregon was sur- prised to find that part of the State of Cali- fornia was in favor of the canal, but that the Southern Pacific was dead set against it.

Arthur R. Briggs, secretary of the Cham- ber of Commerce, told the story of the visit of De Lesseps to San Francisco in the in- terests of the Panama canal. De Lesseps was forced to admit that the people of Cali- fornia were better informed regarding the isthmus than he was. He admitted to the Chamber of Commerce committee that he had made no personal survey of the canal and was not able to give any intelligent ex- planation as to the means of overcoming natural obstacles on the isthmus.

O. W. Crawford of Texas claimed the profit on the cotton that could be sold to China and Japan would alone pay for the interest on the bonds. Congressman-elect Cannon of Los Angeles, Populist, said that he op- posed governmental aid unless the original promoters were either bought out or frozen out. If this canal is controlled by a monop- oly it will combine with the railroads just as the Pacific Mail has done.

T. M. Patterson of Denver, for the inter- est of his State, favored the canal.

The following resolutions on silver coin- age were introduced:

Resolved, That we demand that the Con- gress of the United States immediately re- store the mints of our country to the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold on equal terms at the present ratio of sixteen to one and that the government [illegible] coins of both metals without discrimination.

Resolved, That we are utterly opposed to the repeal of what is known as the Sherman silver purchasing act until it is replaced with a law providing for such free and unlimited coinage.

Colonel Irish of California wanted to know why silver and gold were [illegible] of other [illegible] and why the ratio of 1 to 16 was [illegible] to [illegible]

C. C. Goodwin of The Salt Lake Tribune was called out and said that the ratio of 16 to 1 was [illegible] on [illegible] ratio existed when silver was [illegible]

Governor Waite of Colorado rejoiced to the silver question becoming of interest to men of all parties.

J. A. Lee of Denver and A. C. F[illegible] of Denver spoke, the former against the resolu- tion.

Judge Vanw[illegible] of Sioux City, Ia., declared that the agricultural [illegible] of Iowa [illegible] demonetization of silver [illegible] ing [illegible] of western States. He was in favor of free coinage of silver [illegible] product of the [illegible] (Missouri), [illegible] the [illegible] silver [illegible] by a trick; that Congress in 1873 had [illegible] silver [illegible] will [illegible] his ability.

Dixy of Montana said: In 1873 silver was demonetized [illegible] valuable [illegible] that [illegible] it is now so cheap [illegible] be re- [illegible]

[illegible] will be voted on to-morrow and there is every intimation that they will pass [illegible]

This evening Colonel Irish spoke against unlimited coinage and [illegible] Stewart for it.

A G[illegible] Storm

St. Paul, Minn., April 26.—Reports from one hundred points in Minnesota to-night indicate that the great storm which began last Wednesday with a [illegible] of snow is still raging. Since daylight this morning it has been alternately raining, hailing and snowing. Farmers all over this region are pretty nearly discouraged over the outlook for crops. Not an acre of grain has been sown in the northern portion of the state.

Sunday School Rally To-day.

The annual convention of the El Paso County Sunday School association will be held at the Methodist Church in this city to- day and to-morrow. It will open this after- noon with a grand rally and mass meeting of all the Sunday schools in this city and vicinity. The public schools will close at 3 o'clock and the scholars will meet at their [illegible] receive a badge on which the name of their school will be printed. They then march to the north park, where there will be a band concert. They will then proceed to the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches, where [illegible] will be held.

The singing will be led by a large chorus under Professor Bach. Among the speakers for the afternoon will be Miss Mary Lathrop, a talented lady from Denver. It is expected that at least twelve hundred scholars will be [illegible] and the occasion will be one of rare interest.

At the [illegible] of the convention, an address will be given by Dr. Hart of Den- ver, Dean of St. John's Cathedral.

In the convention [illegible] for every fifty [illegible] the [illegible] two [illegible] This will undoubtedly be the [illegible] assembly of [illegible] in the [illegible] gave two numbers, "Love On," and "Oh, That We Two were Maying," which were re- ceived with hearty applause.

A very artistic pianist is Miss Hart. She received the quite unusual mark of approba- tion last evening of being recalled for en- cores after each of her piano solos. She gave Wagner's "Fire Charm" and Liszt's "Sec- ond Rhapsodie" in a thoroughly delightful manner. Her welcome in Colorado Springs is certainly as hearty as one could wish.

Miss Martyn Hart possesses an excellent contralto voice of volume and richness as was amply noted in Barnby's "When the Tide Comes in" and "My Lady's Bower." She gave for encores two dainty little num- bers which greatly pleased the audience.

Mr. Paul Stoeving already has a good reputation in Colorado Springs as a violinist. He was seen at his best—and that is saying a great deal, in a Chopin nocturne and "Gipsy Dances." His tone on the violin is charac- terized by rare expression and his technique is excellent.

Seventy-fourth Anniversary.

The Odd Fellows of Colorado Springs and Colorado City celebrated the Seventy-fourth anniversary of the founding of the order in America, by a visit to Manitou. In response to an invitation from Manitou lodge, about one hundred and fifty Odd Fellows and Daughters of Rebekah went to Manitou by special trains, over the Rapid Transit sys- tem. The visitors were met at the depot by Manitou lodge and a brass band, and after forming in line were marched through the town to the stirring strains of the bass drum. Upon arrival at Wheeler hall the visitors climbed to the third story and were met by a gentleman who quietly said: "Tickets, please." Then, for the first time, many of the visitors became aware that it was neces- sary to secure tickets in order to gain admis- sion to the hall. The tickets were to be ob- tained upon payment of $1. A number of the visitors refused to pay and quietly walked down the stairs, took a drink of soda water by moonlight and then re- turned home. Others, however, paid their dollar and entering the hall listened to the following programme:

Midland Affairs.

General Manager Colbran of the Midland said yesterday that he would move his office to Denver on Monday next. He said that he had not received the circular announcing his jurisdiction as general agent as yet, but that he supposed it would be from Dodge City [illegible] he would be located in Den- ver and have a very [illegible] position. In regard to the announced cut rate of $1 to Denver, made by the D. and R. G., he said he could not speak definitely, but doubted very much [illegible] the Santa Fe [illegible] it.

In October, 1803, King George III review- ed nearly [illegible] loyal volunteers in Hyde park, and when a certain well set up and well drilled companies [illegible] past him he inquired of their colonel who they were and whence they came. "They are all law- yers, sir," said Lord Erskine.

It was not a very brilliant [illegible] of royal pleasantry, but it has had a long life, for the fighting [illegible] of the [illegible] have been the "Devil's Own" ever [illegible] not [illegible] painting the title [illegible] the "[illegible]" into the [illegible] third Middlesex at the time of the [illegible] they are, the Fourth Middlesex.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE NAVAL DISPLAY.

To-day the armored fleet of the world [illegible] in New York harbor will [illegible] before the eyes of [illegible] and thus fitly open the series of events which will commemorate the Columbian year. The parade takes place very properly at New York, a city which for many years has been the commercial metropolis of the New World, and which in all probability will still be such when the next Columbian anniversary rolls around. The naval parade in the waters of that magnificent harbor and before that great city will form a fitting introduction of the foreigners to the wonders that await them a thousand miles inland at the Exposition in Chicago.

But interesting as the city and the shores of the New World will be to the thousands on board the ships, a greater interest will be felt by the hundreds of thousands who will look from the shore towards the ships. The vessels assembled represent the highest and most modern types of naval construction. Built by rich and powerful governments, no money or skill has been spared in making them suitable for the purposes for which they are designed and not alone as fighting machines and floating batteries but in a thousand details of minor mechanism and ingenious contrivance they are most remarkable examples of modern skill and modern resources. The great battle ships, the floating Gibraltars which now line the European coasts, are indeed absent but in the swifter cruisers there is a higher development of constructive skill even than in the battle ships and in cruisers armored and unarmored the nations are well represented. The ships of the United States are ones of which Americans may well be proud, and they have nothing to fear in comparison with their foreign rivals. It is true that the cruisers now under course of construction, the New York, the Brooklyn and the Columbia, are larger and better than anything that will bear the Stars and Stripes to day but the navy is now ready are not by any means to be despised.

Of the foreign ships, England's famous Blake with her 9000 tons and 20,000 horse power, heads the list. Hardly less formidable is the crack ship of the German navy, the new Kaiserin Augusta, of 12,000 horse power and 6052 tons. Next to her [illegible] comes another [illegible] the armored cruiser Australia of [illegible] and 8500 horse power. The Russian [illegible] of 7000 horse power [illegible], Spain's Reina Regente of [illegible] and 11,000 horse power and [illegible] of 8000 horse power [illegible] of the [illegible] ships Italy's [illegible] Cabinet [illegible] vessels of [illegible] are [illegible]. There are three or four of [illegible] are worthy of [illegible], for they each carry two 10-inch [illegible] larger guns than even the Blake or the [illegible]. Other [illegible] nations are represented by [illegible] of various kinds some of which are well worthy the attention of naval architects.

Altogether the naval display cannot fail to be a success and ought besides to have a good effect in increasing international friendship and esteem.

MORE GOLD

The situation in New York seems to be somewhat easier partly because it is now certain that Mr. Cleveland will not allow affairs to be brought to a silver basis by declining to pay coin certificates in gold partly because more offers of gold have been received at the sub treasury and partly because it is expected that there will be a smaller drain than usual this week for export. These conditions however may not be permanent, and next week the old trouble may occur again.

It is learned from New York for it seems impossible to get anything definite from Washington that Secretary Carlisle made a proposition to the banks to lend the government $50,000,000 in gold for one year the loan to be secured by ten year 3 per cent. bonds, taken at 111½. This proposition might have been accepted if it had not been coupled with the condition that at the end of the year the government was to have the option of paying the loan. This condition made it practically a call loan and rendered the loan is non negotiable. Such a proposition was of course rejected by the banks.

The counter proposition made to the Secretary by the banks, is, to turn over $50,000,000 in gold to the Treasury Department and take in exchange government certificates or notes bearing 2½ per cent. interest said certificates to be counted in the reserve and used in settlement of balances at the clearing house instead of money. This is a plain business proposition and if it were possible for the government legally to issue such certificates probably nothing better could be done than to accept it. The banks would make 2½ per cent. on their loan, not a very exhorbitant rate of interest, and the government would get its $50,000,000 in gold to be added to the reserve in the treasury.

It is extremely doubtful, however, whether the government without a new act of Congress has now power to issue any such certificates as these. The Treasury Department is dependent upon Congress for its power to issue bonds or other certificates of indebtedness. Congress has not authorized the issue of any such 2½ per cent. certificates. It seems to follow, therefore, that the Secretary of the Treasury has not power to comply with the request of the banks. If this is so some other expedient must be found to meet the requirements of the situation.

Carl Schurz made a speech in New York Tuesday night in which he alleged that "the ravages committed by Mr. Clarkson in the postal service during Mr. Harrison's administration called for more severe criticism than those committed by Mr. Stevenson. [illegible] four hundred and fifty removals made by Mr. Maxwell now, whatever explanation may be given, call for greater condemnation than 500 removals made by Mr. Clarkson four years ago." Mr. Maxwell has been making removals at the rate of fifty a day for at least thirty days. Probably in all he has made something like 2000. Has more than forty times as much noise been made over this as over 500 of Mr. Clarkson's?

Mr. Cleveland has come to the conclusion to send back the same delegates to the Monetary Conference as were in Brussels last year. He could not well make a better selection, and it is to be hoped that Senator Allison and Senator Jones will reconsider their withdrawals. If the same delegates go back, and if it is known that they possess the backing of our administration the conference is very likely to be successful in coming to some agreement by which silver may be used as money by all the leading nations, but if they are sent without such endorsement the conference will come to nothing.

Australia is indulging in a regular old fashioned financial panic. Banks and other institutions are failing every day and the situation is constantly growing worse. The reasons for this are not far to seek. The Australian colonies have been discounting their future with absolute recklessness for ten years past and borrowing money at a rate which would be regarded as dangerous by any older and well settled country on earth. There has been the biggest kind of a boom, and now has come the inevitable collapse.

Mr. Patrick Egan, our minister to Chile is coming home and his successor, Judge Porter, will start for Santiago in about three weeks. Mr. Egan has succeeded in getting our government into pretty warm water during part of his term of office and his last performance in sheltering the refugees, Fuentes and Holly has been disavowed by the government. In the Baltimore affair however he seems to have acted wisely and patriotically throughout.

The Russian exhibit for the World's Fair has arrived at Baltimore and will soon be in position at Chicago. At the Centennial Exposition the Russian exhibit was among the most attractive, and it will probably be still finer this year.

The Bering Sea Arbitration

There is in Paris some surprise at the development of these proceedings. The arguments are not now expected to conclude for another month. The arbitrators may then take a month more to consider them and have intimated that during the period of incubation counsel must hold themselves in readiness to reargue all doubtful points. That would bring the matter nearly to the end of June, and there is on the part of the numerous and very eminent counsel on both sides some natural impatience at their unexpected and perhaps unreasonable detention from other duties. The rate of compensation to the Americans concerned was fixed with reference to a much shorter period, and so was the whole appropriation for the expenses of this arbitration. The appropriation, as usual in such cases, was much too small. Our agent, Mr. Foster has been attacked for wasteful expenditure. I believe the truth is that, but for his economical and good business management there would have been a very good prospect of serious financial embarrassment. The English, on the other hand, have unlimited funds. The English Foreign Office is always able to spend what money it likes, so liberal are the parliamentary estimates for that office. The English counsel, too are rewarded in proportion to length of service and Sir Charles Russell and Sir Richard Webster may just as their souls in well paid patience. There is reason to believe that both the English counsel and the arbitrators have heard with surprise the views on which the United States now base their claims. Our case, in other words, is stronger than anybody supposed. —G. W. Smalley, in New York Tribune.

A Smouldering Rebellion

Quebec is not flourishing. Progress is making headway elsewhere in the Dominion, but Quebec proceeds so slowly that its relative place in the North American advance is almost as if it were standing still. An old race, working with old methods on old and worn lands, is an anachronism in the nineteenth century movement. Nevertheless this is French Canada of to-day—very much the same French Canada that stood in the way of the English two centuries ago.

It is not true, of course, that nineteenth century influences have not affected the simple and interesting people who dwell along the shores of the St. Lawrence but it is absolutely true that the great majority of them are very like their ancestors of the seventeenth century. The disintegrating enlightenment of modern life is beginning to exert its power. A few of the French Canadians are rebelling against the burdens of their church. Fewer still are turning towards Protestantism. Among the quick and clever lawyers, doctors, and politicians of the race there is growing up a set of radicals and free-thinkers. The group has existed for a long time. Some of the names now prominent in French intellectual circles in Montreal are to be found attached to the annexation circular of 1848. The group is increasing in numbers, and although it is still very far from being an important political power it has its daily and weekly press and furnishes leading statesmen and orators to the Liberals both of the Dominion and the province. Far more important than all other influences is that which is exerted by the emigrants who have made their way into the United States. It is this emigration which is the important fact in the contemporary history of Quebec, for it is not only depriving the country of some of its best and most vigorous blood, and reducing the tithes of the church, but it is instilling new blood into those who go away it is giving them a new intellectual atmosphere. These new [illegible] and this [illegible] mental stimulus are strongly felt [illegible] in the old parishes of Canada, where busy minds are at work on new problems. There are plenty of signs of the end of the domination of authority in Quebec, priestly and political is waning. It may not be felt in the near future, but the seeds of a change have been planted by French Canadians and by the peculiar institutions of the United States.—[From "A Dissatisfied Province," by Henry Loomis Nelson, in Harper's Magazine for May.

Wedding Presents in Several Countries

"Giving wedding presents is an old custom," said Albert Frankland, a Maine jeweler, "but the custom differs in different countries. Scotland's penny weddings were peculiar. They were called penny affairs, but the invited guests contributed shillings and occasionally a half crown, and out of the sums thus collected the expenses of the wedding feast were paid. In Germany has a 'pay wedding,' at which the bride receives her guests with a [illegible] her in which each person entering deposits a jewel, a silver spoon or a piece of money. In some parts of Germany the rule is that the expense of the marriage feast shall be met by each guest paying for what he eats and drinks, a sort of European plan wedding, you might call it.

"The prices paid for dishes and drinks are high, and the happy young couple make a handsome profit out of their wedding, often realizing a sum sufficient to start them pretty nicely in life. Often 300 guests are present at such a wedding. Sometimes the flow of presents is in the other direction. In Poland for instance, a girl is not regarded eligible for marriage until she has wrought with her own hands cloth and garments for the friends who will accompany her future lord to the altar. But in most countries the wedding present system is similar to that which is familiar here and which has become a serious tax."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Before the French Revolution.

Before the revolution the government established warehouses at which the inhabitants were compelled to purchase their stock of salt. These warehouses were numerous in some provinces and few in others, but whether sufficient or insufficient for the needs of the population they were often situated at a considerable distance from the towns and villages, whose inhabitants had to trudge miles along bad roads to buy their salt. But this was not all. It was prescribed by law that the head of every family must lay in his stock of salt not at such times as might suit his own convenience but on one stated day in the year. Should he fail in this observance he was fined and he was also fined if he purchased a smaller quantity than the law prescribed. His hardships did not stop even there.

On making his annual purchase he had to state the different purposes for which he intended to use the salt during the ensuing year and in the event of his being discovered salting his soup instead of his pork according to his statement or his pork instead of his soup on the day he had named he was also liable to a fine. His kitchen was never secure from the intrusion of the inspecting officer and woe to the housewife who was detected in any petty infraction of this law.—Nineteenth Century.

A Suggestion For a Nurse

When you need a nurse, look about for some country cousin, some minister's daughter, some girl brought up clean and pure and refined. Tell her you will take her as a sister or friend at so much a month she to share your cares and responsibilities as far as she can and have a home and society within certain bounds. Make the position as you want it. Define its duties, privileges, bounds and recompense then find some one to fill it. And remember that the more sensibly pleasant you make it the higher the grade of person who will fill it. You will say Utopia, but it can be done.

Mrs. Diver has the ideal country cousin working for her living and taking music and night school work. She and Julia accomplish the work without a servant. A washerwoman once a week is all that is necessary, and Mrs. Diver is so content with this way that her only worry about the matter is expressed when she says of Julia, "Yes, she'll marry. They all do."—Mothers' Nursery Guide.

Taking a Case Out of Court.

Judges do not interfere with the trial of cases as a rule, though it is sometimes hard work for them to refrain especially when they see a lawyer in airing his client by mismanaging his case. Sometimes they help him out in the interests of justice but ordinarily they allow the case to go on. I recall an important case which was begun before one of our courts awhile ago. It was complicated with technicalities and a proper decision involved a knowledge of business methods which the ordinary juryman was not likely to have. The trial proceeded a little while when the judge stopped it, called both counsel to him and said: "This case can't be properly tried here. Let me take it from the jury and I will refer it to [illegible] business men who shall hear it and [illegible] it." Both lawyers agreed, and it was disposed of in that way.—Boston Globe.

Make Your Own Opportunities.

The true way to deal with adverse circumstances is to be a still greater circumstance yourself. Nine out of ten of the men who have been eminently successful in their callings have fought the battle of life up hill against many opposing forces. Instead of bemoaning their fate, they have bowed to the inevitable and used it to their advantage. Instead of asking fortune to provide chess board they have taken the one before them and played the game.

Look at that tireless worker Lord Brougham. Can any one believe that by any combination of circumstances his talents could have been kept from asserting themselves and winning recognition? It has been said that if his station had been that of a shoeblack he would never have rested content till he had become the first shoeblack in England.—William Mathews in Harper's Young People.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Mrs. Gittings Gives [illegible]
[illegible]

To th[illegible]

I have [illegible] tian Temperance [illegible] have allowed [illegible] date for school [illegible] statement [illegible] important [illegible] engaging [illegible] lic. There [illegible] is no [illegible] voter.

In a city [illegible] increasing [illegible] community [illegible] always [illegible] rents, [illegible] under the [illegible] the present [illegible] the continued use [illegible] the available [illegible] ing until such [illegible] fortable ward school [illegible] where needed. [illegible] most pressing need [illegible] good school house [illegible] once if possible. [illegible] nexes" in which [illegible] their health should [illegible]

There is a strong [illegible] that the grade [illegible] tendency to overtax [illegible] pils. In this opinion [illegible] of the teachers share. [illegible] the discussion [illegible] called "fads" of our [illegible] think that in the [illegible] we have no "fads," [illegible] arise from the excess of [illegible] our children to know.

A well known writer [illegible] busy lives of ours [illegible] crowded out, and the [illegible] upon what we are wanting [illegible] out." So I think that [illegible] if not paramount importance [illegible] ing problem is what [illegible] of our school curriculum [illegible] children be not broken in [illegible] in intellect before they reach the goal of the High school.

I believe heartily in the "higher [illegible] tion," and think it the glory of [illegible] school system that the children of the poor have equal opportunity with the rich to become liberally educated, but I [illegible] that we should look with more [illegible] to the interests of the lower grades which are the foundation stones of the High school.

Not everyone seems to recognize that in Colorado Springs we are confronted by peculiar conditions to which [illegible] ourselves regardless of what [illegible] do. We are a city of invalids [illegible] valids, whose children, by an [illegible] ble law of heredity are [illegible] physical endurance. [illegible] well-known fact that [illegible] tiar the nervous strain here [illegible] fely undertaken in a lower [illegible]. My belief, founded upon my experience as teacher and more especially as mother and upon conversation with other mothers, is that no work should be required of pupils, in the lower grades at least, which cannot be performed by the average child during the allotted school hours. They should leave the schoolroom care free until the next entering in.

It has been said that all this problem of study can be safely left with the superintendent and teachers, yet the fact remains that the Board of Education is the ultimate court of appeal in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the school. This is as it should be since they are the officers serving by direct choice of the people.

In making these statements of opinion, I wish it understood that I desire to cast no reflection whatever upon the past management of either school officers or teachers. I believe that we have been served by men and women who have faithfully done their duty as it has been given them to see it. Certainly the office of school director is no sinecure. There is no money in it that one should desire it; and as yet no halo of glory has encircled its members no matter how conscientiously they have been their performance of perplexing duties. Let us, as parents, bear in mind how much easier it is to criticise from without, than to act wisely from within such a body.

ELLA BEECHER GITTINGS.

Colorado Springs, April 26, 1893.

A pleasant surprise was given Professor Bach at the meeting yesterday afternoon of the Sunday school chorus which he is instructing for the rally. Master Howard Carrington in behalf of the chorus presented him with a beautiful pair of opera glasses. Professor Bach is much pleased with this evidence of the appreciation of his services.

A Good Notice.

Secretary Buckman's fine Italian hand can be seen in the eastern papers almost any day now. He manages to get a good notice of the city in the newspapers of every place he visits. The following is from the New York Commercial Gazette:

Mr. George Rex Buckman, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Colorado Springs, is in the city and spoke glowingly of the many attractions of that famous health and pleasure resort. Colorado Springs is located, as most tourists know, in the very center of the most beautiful scenic environs in the world. The famous Garden of the Gods with its wonderful formations of rock and granite is within a short journey of the Springs. The town itself, says Mr. Buckman, has grown to be a city of 13,000 inhabitants. The tough element which is generally characteristic of western towns has always been conspicuous at Colorado Springs by its absence. The principal citizens are mostly [illegible] capitalists who have gone out for health or recreation and having become fascinated have stayed there.

The city has some excellent institutions, including the El Paso Club, whose building cost $50,000, and the Childs-Drexel Home for invalid printers. The Broadmoor Casino, on the banks of Cheyenne Lake, three miles away and the Cog railroad to the top of Pike's Peak are other attractive features for visitors. What gives promise of being a rich gold-mining camp has recently been developed near Colorado Springs. It is known as Cripple Creek Camp, and it is expected will produce gold in large quantities.

New York Stock Market.

New York, April 26.—The sales of listed stocks to-day aggregated 160,148 shares and of unlisted stocks 14,160 shares.

Money on call has been easy, ranging from 6 to 3½, last loan at 3½ and closing offered at 3½. Government bonds have been steady.

The stock market was dull. The fluctuations in prices were generally slight. The interest taken in the naval pageant and the fact that the exchange will be closed tomorrow tended to curtail operations. In spite of the dullness, however, a firm tone characterized the dealings, purchases being stimulated by the further reduction in the rates of sterling exchange, the ease in money and the statements by bankers that no gold exports are to be expected by to-morrow's or Saturday's steamers. A majority of stocks closed fractionally above last night's figures. Reading was especially strong and toward the end closed at 26 against 24¼ at the opening. Favorable reports in regard to the plan for funding the floating debt were instrumental in causing the advance, which had a sympathetic effect on the general list. The Grangers were in demand and closed at top figures. New England gave way suddenly after 11 o'clock from 32⅝ to 30⅝, but latter rallied to 31⅛.

Silver 83⅛. Sterling exchange 4.85¼@4.85½; sight drafts, 4.87½@4.88.

WHERE TO STOP IN CHICAGO

The perplexing question which is every day asked by people who desire to go to Chicago to attend the World's Fair is, "Where are we going to stay when we get there?" This is easily answered and if you will go to the ticket agent of the Santa Fe, Mr. E. J. Edwards at the depot or C. C. Hoyt, at city ticket office, he will tell you.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution by the Santa Fe company of a pamphlet entitled Homes for Visitors to the World's Fair. This is a reliable pamphlet containing the names and addresses of about 9,[illegible] families who will furnish accommodation to visitors from May 1st to October 31st, 1893. The pamphlet also contains sectional maps which will enable the intending visitor to select any quarter of the city that he would prefer. Correspondence can then be carried on and definite arrangements made so that when visitors arrive in Chicago they can proceed at once to their quarters.

POINTERS FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Footprints in the sands of time this year will all be turned toward Chicago, where the great Columbian Exposition will be held.

While walking may be good, the great majority of Coloradoans will prefer riding on a solid Santa Fe route vestibuled train.

Luxurious palace sleeping cars, fine dining service and free reclining chair cars; better than the best of other lines.

Columbian limited leaves Denver 1:25 p. m.; Colorado Springs 4:22 p. m.; Pueblo 6:30 p. m.

Denver and Chicago limited leaves Denver 6 p. m.; Colorado Springs 9:35 p. m.; Pueblo 11 p. m.

Eastern express leaves Denver 11:05 p. m.; Colorado Springs 2:10 a. m.; Pueblo 4:05 a. m.

Our rates will be as low as the lowest.

Drop in and talk it over with (or write) the nearest Santa Fe ticket agent.
